

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Save for victory.

Our country first.

Your King and country need you—now

In that particular sector the French have made a clean Suipe.

The new German Chancellor has not called off the submarine murderers.

If the Spanish Influenza is the ordinary grip it is an extraordinary form of it.

Naturally it was a division of the Bull dog breed that captured the Terrier Plateau.

The Central powers will be more central than ever when Bulgaria and Turkey are both on the outside.

The blazing cities of France have kindled a flame in the heart of humanity which the Germans cannot put out.

The range of price control has been extended to gasoline, and it should cover good many other articles.

If overcrowding spreads the Influenza the pedestrian, the motorist, and the stay-at-homes will have the advantage over the street car patrons of Toronto.

Hindenburg is reported to have quit the job after a row with the Emperor. It would have been still better if Hindenburg had made the Emperor quit his job.

Municipalities have not the information or the organization for creating fair price lists. The new order in Council is another instance of the process familiarly known as "passing the buck."

Not so much is heard now from the experts who have been urging the Press not to scare the people with talk of an epidemic of influenza. They are probably busy dodging the "flu" themselves.

The City Council of Toronto will defend the suit to prevent the payment of $15,000 to the Knights of Columbus Hut Fund. Not to have defended it would have been as narrow-minded as the suit itself.

The sum of £1,500,000 has been paid for The London Chronicle and several other publications. It is not surprising to read in the despatches that the purchasers own a paper mill. That accounts for the opulence.

The Bulgars are now shunning the very appearance of evil and are ordering Germans and Austrians to leave the country. If they had done that four years ago the Balkan countries would have been spared the great calamity of fratricidal war.

General Sir Arthur Currie will remain in command of the Canadian Corps. The corps and its leader are both honored by the decision. Sir Arthur could find no finer body of men in the British army to lead, and the corps could not find a better leader.

If the Germans deliberately burn Lille, they have burned Douai and are burning Laon, the French will assuredly put the torch to some of the German cities of the Rhine when they reach them. The eye-for-an-eye form of reprisals is greatly favored by France.

Britain grew eighty-four million bushels of wheat during the season of 1918, compared with an average of 57,487,000 bushels yearly in the period 1912-16. That would mean a decrease of over 800,000 tons in the importation of wheat this season and the release of many vessels for war service.
