

TO GLOBE SUBSCRIBERS

Along with the rest of the community, The Globe's delivery staff has been affected by the epidemic of Spanish influenza.

Many boys are confined to their homes, and as far as possible their places are filled with substitutes. But this is not practicable in every case, and in a number of instances carriers are "doubling up"—taking a route in addition to their own.

In these circumstances, The Globe delivery may be later than usual. As the condition is unavoidable, The Globe asks the indulgence of its readers until the epidemic has abated.
